There are two core areas of finance within the retail sector where graduates can find a niche:

The central finance function deals with reporting financial information to internal management and external regulatory bodies.

The commercial finance side is concerned with analysing the figures reported by the central finance teams to measure performance and make strategic recommendations. If you work in commercial finance in retail you may be analysing the results of particular product promotions or looking at the performance of an individual store.

Within large retailers there are individual finance teams supporting all the different areas within the business, from merchandising to digital teams.

Whichever team or area of retail finance you work in, you will normally be based in the office, rather than on the shop floor. However, you will regularly meet with people from other parts of the business. A standard working day is from 9.00 am until 5.30 pm, although
